Buy Bonds Regularly Is Plea of Chairman

By Mrs. John L. Kilcoyne
(War Bond Chairman)

Know your family's income and expenses. Figure out for yourself how much you really need to spend for actual necessities, then put the rest, every penny of it, into war bonds. You know your own budget. Be your own banker. Make your own rules and then stick by them. Don't just save "saving money" that would have gone into the bank anyway; save "spending money," money that otherwise would have been spent on something foolish.

Above all, don't cash in your bonds unless you are faced with a real emergency. Putting money into bonds and then taking it out again is just like giving a soldier a gun and then snatching it away when the enemy comes over the hill. Build extra bonds like a house of blocks, steadily, regularly, block by block, stamp by stamp. Build extra bonds!

CIO THINKS IT OVER

Several months ago the CIO served notice on the nation at large that it intended to plunge full tilt into political activity and backed up this declaration by mustering a $450,000 slush fund ostensibly to smooth the way for the Fourth Term Candidate. There was no misreading the CIO's purpose and it was easy to see that Philip Murray, boss of the powerful labor group, had wormed his way into the President's inner circle and was in a strategic position to barter labor's support for White House favors.

That was before the Republican sweep in the November elections. Now Mr. Murray isn't so sure that he wants to commit himself to the New Deal in the Presidential derby of 1944.

After taking a look at the returns and conjuring a new and healthier respect for the Republican Party, Mr. Murray said:

"Our organization is not ready to give all its interests, lock, stock and barrel, to any one man, anywhere in the world."

However, Mr. Murray is cagey. While his statement, on the surface, indicates that the CIO would not be impervious to Republican overtures, he still manages to maintain the graces with the Man in the White House by admitting that if the President were to run in the next few months "I would still raise my voice for the nomination and election of Franklin Delano Roosevelt."

This proves that Mr. Murray is a diplomat as well as shrewd bargainer.

He dangles the bait before Republican eyes by declaring in the next breath:

"I don't like Washington today. The administrative agencies are throttling every labor organization in America. Under those circumstances it would be regrettable if the CIO took the untimely action to condemn the tendencies of the administration."

In other words, suave Mr. Murray wags sly finger at the New Deal and warns that if it doesn't clean itself up to labor's satisfaction, there are always other political pastures in which to graze. This, of course, is a deferential bow in the direction of the Republican Party.

Plainly, Mr. Murray's job between now and the Presidential sweepstakes will be to keep his slippers under both beds. The CIO chief will have a busy time trying to ingratiate himself with Republicans and still hold his seat on the New Deal exchange.

While Mr. Murray's strategy may be laudable from the standpoint of labor, it is doubtful if his foxy machinations will make a dent among Republicans who have taken the back of Mr. Murray's hand every time he saw fit to lick the Presidential boots.

Mr. Murray and other overlords of labor might better confine their activities to their own sphere rather than try to match political wits with the giant mentality in the White House. In the words of Benny the Barber, "somebody is going to get trimmed."

The labor czars may look with jackal wisdom upon the desirability of a place at the Presidential table only to find that the Chief himself has jerked the seat out from under them. The President has been known to torpedo his closest friends when the occasion demanded it. Mr. Murray and the other sounding boxes of labor need not feel that they are immune to the vagaries of the Presidential mind.

What Mr. Roosevelt's present attitude toward Mr. Murray may be is not hard to reckon on the face of the November election returns. Mr. Murray's current dislike of Washington and the New Deal may have been engendered by the Presidential query:

"Where in the name of blazes was labor in last Tuesday's elections?"

Mr. Murray's bargaining strength with the Man in the White House lay in his purported ability to deliver the vote.

After Mr. Murray's dismal failure in the November elections, his subtle attempt to woo Republican leadership, albeit retaining his membership in the White House union, is understandable as a ploy in the nose.

Someday the great body of labor . . . and we mean those honest, conscientious American workers who are doing a superlative war job . . . will awaken to the fact that bumptious leaders like Philip Murray, Sidney Hillman, William Green and Joe Curran are a liability, not an asset.

Escaped "Lifer" Killed by State Police

Chester—Victor Andreoli, life-term convict who escaped from the Eastern Penitentiary in Philadelphia 11 days ago, was shot and killed by State Police today in a Chester restaurant.

The 27-year-old fugitive, who had boasted that "the first cop that lays a hand on me dies," was felled by four bullets from the pistols of three policemen when they surprised him as he ate breakfast in the Rainbow Grille.

The police acted on a tip from a former prisoner mate of Andreoli's who reported seeing the escaped prisoner in Chester last night.

Andreoli was sentenced to a life term in 1937 for the slaying of State Trooper John Broske, who was shot to death during a holdup in an East End Boulevard cafe, near Wilkes-Barre, in August of that year.

ly in November," Mr. Duffy warned today.

Transportation facilities are burdened to the limit with war materials and personnel, and the Postal Service has sent more than thirty-one thousand experienced employees into the Army and Navy." Mr. Duffy said. "The only solution to the Christmas problem is: MAIL IN NOVEMBER. Mark your parcels 'DO NOT OPEN UNTIL CHRISTMAS.' That is the only way to avoid disappointment on Christmas Day not only for many civilians but also for millions of members of the armed forces who are still in this country.

"It is also the only way to avoid the possibility of a Christmas emergency in the transportation and postal services. If the public will co-operate by mailing their Christmas parcels during November, we can handle small volume of light last-minute mailings, such as cards, up to December 10—but we can do that and avoid an emergency only if November is really 'Christmas Month.'"

Postal officials pointed out that the volume of mail now is far above any previous records, that railway cars by the hundreds have been diverted to war service and that the air lines have only about half as many planes as they once operated.

More than two hundred thousand extra temporary employees normally are employed to help with the holiday postal rush. This year, the extra employees will be largely women and high school boys and girls who are unable to work the long hours usually required and whose work will be relatively slow.

To deliver the Christmas mails on time, therefore, it is necessary that mailings be spread out over a longer period so that available transportation equipment and postal personnel can be used during more weeks. It will be utterly impossible to make the deliveries by Christmas if mailers wait until the last three weeks before the holiday, as in normal years.

There is another reason for shopping and mailing earlier than ever before. Retail stores are short-handed. Purchasers can avoid shopping in crowded stores, long waits for service, and other inconveniences of late shopping if they buy now. They will also doubtless have a better choice of merchandise than will be available later.

HAT KEITH WOMAN
by PHYLIS MOORE GALLAGHERSYNOPSIS

Letty Randolph, society reporter, estranged daughter Pamela Keith, to cancel her daughter Sandra's bat, scheduled for that afternoon.

"That Keith woman," as Letty's mother termed her, had long figured sensational in the news. At 19, her elopement with Wayne Courtney, young medical student, was promptly annulled by her parents. Later, in South America, she met wealthy Richard Keith, who divorced his wife, Gladys Newcomb Keith, so he could marry Pam. Pam, Richard was killed in an auto accident soon after their daughter Sandra's birth. Now, twenty years later, after many romantic interludes, Pam was engaged to likable Luke Kramer, though everyone had expected he would marry Gladys, Richard Keith's ex-wife. Letty, en route to Sandra's party, took a short cut through the hedge to the Keith mansion, which adjoined her notes. She observed the stark fear in Pam's eyes as she welcomed her guests, while Sandra seemed grimly angry, especially when she greeted Victor Corliss, with whom she was in love. Letty was thrilled when Countess Faustina Castiglioni presented handsome Peter Gibson, but she bristled when he to her he had crashed the party. Later, at a small dinner, Letty saw that Pam had surrounded herself with the most antagonistic people: Elsie Eastace and her husband Marvin, whose name had been linked romantically with Pam's; Dr. Wayne Courtney, her first husband, recently returned to Washington after fifteen years abroad; Countess Castiglioni, whose biography had slurred Pam, supercilious Earle Pines, and Gladys Newcomb, from whom Pam had annexed two men. Letty noticed Reginald, the Keith butler, eyeing Gladys. Sandra had gone on to the club with her debt friends. Pam's frightened manner clung to her, even after Luke Kramer phoned from Philadelphia. Gladys directed a malevolent look at her hostess, as Pam explained that Luke was ill. Letty, anxious to write her story of Sandra's debut, left shortly before ten o'clock. Near the opening in the hedge, she saw a silhouetted figure creeping toward the rear of Pam's house. Letty was attacked by the prowler, but escaped after biting his neck. Later, she changed her torn gown and set out for Pam's house. Horrified, she discovered Pam's body lying near the hedge. Peter Gibson, who was not present at the dinner, is among the first to answer Letty's hysterical screams. In the confusion, Gladys Newcomb remarked about Letty's change of dress. Letty is puzzled when Peter refuses to explain his presence. She is telling the story.

BUTTER RAIDERS

The conventional butter distribution system of the country was disrupted on a grand scale when the government took much of the butter production for lend-lease, the armed services, etc.

Prof. E. F. Kille, agricultural economist at the University of Minnesota's farm school, says many Minnesota dairymen are discarding long established outlets for butter to sell to "eastern raiders." Buyers find many ways to evade ceilings on prices.

But that is really the way of lessening the national wealth, not increasing it. Business can only flourish—and wealth increase—when there is the opportunity for ever-widening expansion. Business needs both freedom and competition if it is to bring prosperity to the country.

A look at the record of New Deal legislation shows that the consistent objective has not been to expand business by promoting enterprise but to keep business under as tight control as possible. The New Deal has wanted to induce a more or less static condition in business and then see that the resulting wealth was evenly distributed. In that way only, the New Deal professors assured the country, could there be continued prosperity.

But that is really the way of lessening the national wealth, not increasing it. Business can only flourish—and wealth increase—when there is the opportunity for ever-widening expansion. Business needs both freedom and competition if it is to bring prosperity to the country.

CHAPTER TEN

Charlton Arms is company at its hour when all but the gamblers, insomniacs, conmen, merchants, milkmen, burglars, night club habitués and rooment dodgers are in bed. The Wings—both A and B—were securely fastened. That meant Peter and I would have to walk westward around the vast red-brick building, through a densely wooded park to arrive, eventually, in front of the house where the main entrance presented the only unlocked door.

Earle certainly looked like the best bet if appearance had anything to do with it. Somehow I always looked at all the others then, one by one: Marvin Eastace, Elsie Eastace, Doctor Wayne Courtney, Reginald the butler, the Countess Gladys Newcomb, which was the murderer? Then I saw Earle Pines coming back slowly across the lawn, his shadow stretching out like a giant behind him. My heart began to thud.

Earle certainly looked like the best bet if appearance had anything to do with it. Somehow I always

Army Relief Night
Looks Like Success

"This Is the Army," the Bracken Post, American Legion, which is sponsoring the premier of the picture in Bristol on the evening of November 10th, is arranging for some other features to be on the program.

There may be some tickets available for sale at the box office on the night of the showing, but this cannot be definitely announced at this time.

Arrangements for the Bristol premier of "This Is the Army" is being arranged by a "Bristol Army Relief Night" committee organized by representative citizens of the community.

The proceeds of the showing here, after necessary expenses have been deducted will be paid over to the Army Emergency Relief Association.

The Army Emergency Relief has been organized by the Army to give prompt financial help and other short-term assistance to all soldiers and their dependents who deserve help, whenever and wherever such help is needed. Relief may take the form of money, or aid in kind, such as fuel, hospitalization, medical and dental care, or other emergency services such as assistance in matters of re-employment, allotments and insurance. Soldiers or their dependents can ask for help at any army post, camp or air field or local Red Cross chapter, where full information will be available. A soldier without worries about his family's financial emergencies is a better soldier.

Securing 10 donor for each bleeding day.

Mrs. Harry Nener, representing the Red Cross canteen corps, informed that the corps was organized primarily for emergency work so that a trained group of women would know what foods to secure and how to prepare them in case of emergency. She told of assistance given at the blood donor bank and on other occasions.

Mrs. Kilcoyne mentioned that since the second war loan drive only four per cent of bonds had been cashed. "We must buy bonds regularly not only during drives."

The work of the nurses aids, so much appreciated by patients and hospital staffs alike, was told of by Mrs. William Berlinghof, who is aiding in that work and helping to free trained nurses to care for the boys in the service. "Some of the hospitals have but 50 per cent of their staffs remaining. We nurses' aids do the small jobs that do not require skilled hands—such as taking temperatures, respiration, feed the helpless patients, fill hot-water bottles and ice bags, clean equipment and make beds," she informed.

Mrs. John Leslie Kilcoyne, chairperson of Lower Bucks County War Bond Drives, spoke of the need for money in winning the war. "Many of you have sons and daughters in the service. They are fighting for us, and we must fight for them. We can do that by lending our money, which is used to purchase equipment for the men in service."
